

UCLA PUBLIC HEALTH

JUNE 2003

HIV/AIDS

Population-Based Strategies for a Global Problem

Robert Kim-Farley is one of a number of faculty at the school who are helping to prepare the public health response to the possibility of bioterrorism.

Genetics or the environment? Robert Schiestl knows it's not so simple. His new center is unraveling the complex interactions underlying disease.

Documentary filmmaker Terry Young uses what she learns in the classroom to educate the public on important environmental issues via her art.
